Why study Drama?

Be the best we can be

GCSE Drama helps students to develop skills that they can take on with them to further education or future jobs. It is not only for students who want to become an actor, there are many other transferable skills students will learn over the course of the 2 years.

These include:

Team work – learning to work with others to produce a piece of work. It will help develop patience and communication skills

Improvising and problem solving – as part of the GCSE you are asked to improvise, so thinking on your feet and adapting to different situations

Gaining confidence – Drama helps with this immensely. As you continue through the course this confidence will increase through performances and working with students who you might not have done so before. This will also help with evaluating work and seeing how to improve on it in a supportive and fun environment.

Drama is relevant to a variety of jobs including barristers, broadcast journalists, writers, youth workers, teachers and TV presenters.
